Quarterly fund commentary

The fund will be merged from an Irish to a Luxembourg-domiciled fund vehicle on 5 October 2018. For the quarter, the Bloomberg Barclays Global High Yield (USD) Hedged Index delivered negative returns. During the quarter ten year US Treasuries rates rose 20bps to end at 3.06. Credit spreads in both High Yield and Emerging Markets tightened (improved ability of corporate (and other private) borrowers to service their debt) during the quarter, more than offsetting the rise in yields, and leading to positive returns in both asset classes for the period. Emerging market's rebound lead to outperformance relative to high yield, with sovereign credit outperforming corporate credit. The strategy underperformed its benchmark in the second quarter. The strategy's underweight to emerging market sovereign bonds was a drag as EM sovereign debt posted a strong result. Partly offsetting the overweight to emerging market sovereign issuers was an overweight to emerging market corporate bonds, which also outperformed the broader market. Security selection for developed market high yield corporate issuers was a positive contributor to relative performance as was yield curve / duration positioning for the fund.

Risk Warnings

The value of investments and any income will fluctuate (this may partly be the result of exchange rate fluctuations) and investors may not get back the full amount invested. Debt instruments are exposed to credit risk which is the ability of the borrower to repay the interest and capital on the redemption date. Changes in interest rates will result in fluctuations in the value of the fund. The fund may invest in distressed securities which carry a significant risk of capital loss. As a large portion of the fund is invested in less developed countries, you should be prepared to accept significantly large fluctuations in the value of the fund. Investments in debt instruments which are of lower credit quality may result in large fluctuations in the value of the fund.
